ords Lost.*MOST COSTLY DEED DONE YET*Militants Also Set Fire to St. John's

Strike; "Martyr" Now Near Death.

United Press Telegram.
LONDON, June 21.—The suffrage campaign carried on perhaps the most costly act in their campaign of militancy this morning when they set fire to the marine laboratory of the University of St. Andrews in Scotland, which was burned completely to the ground.

The building contained valuable scientific records and instruments. Many of the records can not be replaced and the damage is considered irreparable.

Militants this morning also set fire to St. John's church in the south of London. The interior of the building was soaked with oil. Cotton waste with tar was scattered about the building, and when the flames arrived the structure was one mass of flame. They worked heroically to extinguish the fire and managed to get it under control before the entire building was completely destroyed. The damage is estimated at $30,000.

In a hospital at Ascot, Harold Hewitt, the Cambridge student who tried to stop the Gold Plate race, is now recovering from his wounds. He would rally from the effect of the operation to his fractured skull, he has continued to grow weaker.

Friends of the youth who visited his bedside this morning say that he is connected with the militant organization. They admit that he is not equal to the task, but say that he is not affiliated with the militants. They do not believe that his act was governed by the suffrage cause.

The condition of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, leader of the militants, this morning is said to be more critical than at any time previous. She is very weak from hunger striking and will only drink a small quantity of water.

Miss Laura Lennox, a militant of the suffragette, was released from Bristol prison this morning. Miss Lennox is the first of the six convicted suffragettes caught in the raid on the women's Political Union headquarters to be given freedom on a "ticket of leave," because of hunger striking.

ACCUSED OF LOBBYINGReuben Howard Gets in Lincolnton at Baltimore.

HARRISBURG, June 21.—The search for the lobby at the state capitol did not meet with great success yesterday. A room was discovered in the Senate wing, but nothing was found there, except a bottle of whiskey often reported on a table and legislators were given first aid to the thirst.

Aside from this nothing of great importance developed. There was no testimony to show that his interests had attempted to influence legislation in any manner.

Peter McDermott, who introduced a bill to restrict the use of electric mining machines, accused Reuben Howard of lobbying against him. Howard declared the bill was not his and was just in his district and he was just in his district and he was just in his district.

It is not believed that the committee has evidence that Howard was illegally by his business interests in behalf of legislation. A story is current here today that Governor Tener will be summoned before the committee to tell of the influence exerted in behalf of the passage of the workmen's compensation act.

HEARING ON RATESRailroads Will Attempt to Show They Are Too Low.

United Press Telegram.
WASHINGTON, June 21.—Yielding to the demands of the 53 railroads operating east of the Mississippi river, the Interstate Commerce Commission this morning agreed to hold hearings at which the representatives of the railroads will be permitted to present evidence showing that the ruling of the committee relative to present freight rates is unjust.

The ruling was made two years ago. Since then, the railroads claim, the cost of operation has increased to such an extent that the profits derived are not sufficient for the amount of capital invested.

Although the date of the hearings has not been designated by the commission, it is known that practically all of the railroads will have attorneys and representatives present.

CAMBRIA COUNTY FARMERS
PLANNING TO CO-OPERATE*Plan Originating in Salt Grocery Store Is Being Worked Out in Detail Today.

Special to The Courier.

JOHNSTOWN, June 21.—Satisfied that by the use of co-operative methods the profits of their farms could be greatly increased, farmers of Adams township, one of the most picturesque agricultural sections in the Allegheny mountains, today are working out the details of a plan for co-operation. The plan will be carried out practically every acre of land in that section. It was while a number of the husky mountaineers were discussing current topics in the village grocery store at Salt, one evening not long ago that the proposition was first suggested. Farmers were approached and the plan explained to them. It was an immediate "hit," and now it is learned that within a short time steps will be taken to effect a permanent organization.

The plan of the Salt farmers is to form a corporation in which all the farms in this section will be worked on the co-operative plan. Every farmer will be a stockholder in the company. He will oversee the work on his own farm, care for his own crops, and when the harvest season has arrived his farm will be visited by directors or agents of the association, who will take charge of the produce and sell it for him. The farmer will get his share of the profits when the dividend is declared.

The association will elect a board of directors. It is said that practically every prominent farmer in that section will become a stockholder in the new association.

MORE TARIFF CUTSThis Time Senate Committee Hints Pennsylvania Interests.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—If there was any vestige of protection to the principal industry of Pennsylvania in the Underwood tariff bill as it passed the House it was wiped out by the Senate committee on finance. The committee made public the bill in the form in which it was presented to the caucus of Democratic Senators, and it indicates that the iron and steel industry has been singled out as the special point of attack by the revolutionists.

Low as the rates were fixed by the House on the chief items of production in this industry, they have been cut still lower by the Senate committee, and the manufacturers are now placed in the position of competition with the foreign trade upon almost equal terms.

"The most radical changes made by the finance committee is the transfer to the free list of pig iron, iron castings, scrap iron, wrought iron and scrap and scrap steel, ferromanganese, iron in slabs, blooms, loops or other forms less finished than iron bars and more advanced than pig iron, except castings, together with steel ingots, cogged ingots, blooms and slabs, die blocks or blanks and billets if made by the Bessemer, Siemens-Martin, open-hearth or similar processes, not containing alloy."

Charles V. Miller, a well-known resident of Indian Head, and his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Frank Miller were operated on Thursday at the home of the latter on Elm street. The operations were successful and both of the patients are getting along nicely.

Mr. Miller, accompanied by his wife, came from Indian Head to be present for the operation to be performed on their daughter-in-law. Mr. Miller had been in poor health for some time and the attending physician advised an operation some time ago. After arriving at his son's home here he submitted to an operation.

OLD TIME CHURCH

FOR A CHANDELIER*That Is What Rev. McIlvay
Called One at Jacobs
Creek.*ITS ANNIVERSARY NOW GOING ON*But in the Brick House of Worship
Which Followed Encounter of Famous Old Circuit Rider and Red
Capped Man in the Amen Corner.

SCOTTSDALE, June 21.—The celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the Jacobs Creek Methodist Episcopal Church, near town, now going on, will close on Sunday with an all day service, in the brick building which took place of the old log one. There will be meetings beginning at 7 o'clock and lasting all day.

In the autobiography of James Jackson McIlvay, preacher, evangelist and Freemason, one of the pioneers of the circuit riding days, licensed to preach in 1844 and for 50 years an active minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, is told an incident of his first service at Jacobs Creek. The Rev. Mr. McIlvay will be remembered by the older people of this section and the story has particular interest in view of this being celebrated as the fiftieth anniversary of the building of Jacobs Creek church.

In 1860 he was given the West Newton and Mt. Pleasant circuit, with William A. Stewart as his colleague. He wrote:

"There were nine appointments of the circuit, and one of the preaching places was Poverty Neck. On my first round I preached at Poverty Neck and on Sunday morning I went to preach at Jacobs Creek at 10:30. As I rode along, I noticed the beautiful farms situated in the valley and the fine buildings thereon, an indication of a rich community, and I expected to find a splendid church building. To my utter surprise I found an old log structure in which Bishop Morris preached when a boy. The furnishings were antiquated, a great log extending across the room, placed there for a double purpose, as a railing and board to assist in the acoustics of the room, and to hold the building together, thereby keeping it from spreading apart. In the center of this altar was an old wooden chandelier with huge arms extending out of wood, for the tallow candles. Near the pulpit was an old cracked stove bound with iron bands to keep it from falling apart, while from every crevice issued a cloud of smoke and the air was filled by the devout worshippers. On the right side of the room there were 22 panes of glass out of the windows and the huts of 10 persons had been inserted to keep out the snow which was falling heavily. It being the latter part of March.

"This picture is not overdrawn—it is actually a fact. Sitting in front of me that wintry day was a small body of people, all well-to-do farmers. There were 19 men and three women in the congregation. Only one man sat in the amen corner. He was a good-sized person, well advanced in years, and wore a red cap, a red coat and a red vest. He was a double purpose, as a railing and board to assist in the acoustics of the room, and to hold the building together, thereby keeping it from spreading apart. In the center of this altar was an old wooden chandelier with huge arms extending out of wood, for the tallow candles. Near the pulpit was an old cracked stove bound with iron bands to keep it from falling apart, while from every crevice issued a cloud of smoke and the air was filled by the devout worshippers. On the right side of the room there were 22 panes of glass out of the windows and the huts of 10 persons had been inserted to keep out the snow which was falling heavily. It being the latter part of March.

"I announced that I would be on hand in two weeks, and asked my congregation to spread the news of the services, as we needed more men and more hats to fill the holes where the glass was broken out. I saw my old brother in the amen corner quiver and felt sure I had struck him, then remarked that I would like to see that turkey roost in front of me removed, as it embarrassed me; and that the old chandelier from Noah's ark is certainly a curiosity; I would like to have a photograph of it for the Methodist archives."

"By this time my man with the fox was raging—his face all aglow with passion, and leaping to his feet he said: 'I say, I say, McKillery, better men than you preached in this house.' 'Yes, I replied, but they are all dead.' 'I say, I say, McKillery, Bishop Morris would preach in this house and he is still living.' 'Well,' I said, 'if Bishop Morris would preach in this house with nineteen huts stuck in the windows to keep the snow out he would shed tears.'"

"Some may say the manner in which I made my statement about the old log was irreverent, but it was the very thing to do at that place to rouse into action the latent energies of a naturally good and noble people in order to bring about better things. God never blesses people in places secretly fit to stock cattle, when the circumstances of people will allow better houses to be built. The Lord is there. There wasn't a huts in that whole community that did not afford better protection to the stock than that church to its worshippers, and I determined that the Lord should not be asked to enter such a place."

"When I came back in two weeks the house was filled with people. The church went to work and before the two years were ended we had a fine brick house erected, and glorious revivals blessed our labors and some grand men were taken into the church who proved a blessing to the world."

FRICK COMPANY IS NOT
MONOPOLY, EXPERT SAYS*John W. Boleas of Pittsburgh Testifies in Federal Steel Combine Suit.

NEW YORK, June 21.—Thomas Lynch, president of the H. C. Frick Coke Company, continued his testimony yesterday in the Federal action to dissolve the United States Steel Corporation. He was on the stand to show the steel trust did not have a monopoly of the coke coal lands.

In 1911 the fatalities in the Frick mines averaged, he said, 1.58 per million tons mined. In the state of Pennsylvania it was 3.82, in United States 5.48, and in Great Britain 4.47.

John W. Boleas of Pittsburgh, a coke and coal expert, said there were 600,000 acres of unmined coke coal land and the Frick company owned about 75,000 acres. He said in 1907 he had an option on 100,000 acres at from $15 to $20 an acre. He said 33,000 acres in 1899 at from $4 to $10.

In 1908, he said, he sold 1,000 acres at $400 an acre and about a year ago sold 4,700 at $400 an acre.

MAY DELAY STARTThe Tracks Must Be Changed to Pave Race Street.

The paving of Race street from Davidson avenue to Green street may not be started very soon. Although contractor Bernard O'Connor has the contract for the work, the rails of the West Penn will have to be changed before the work can be started. The present tracks are of light rails, and it will be necessary to change them to the heavy regulation type used on paved streets.

Spreading of the situation this morning, one of the West Penn officials stated that the company has none of these rails on hand and that it will take several months before they can be secured. The steel company from which the West Penn orders rails will not roll any seven-inch rails for at least 60 days.

GO OVER TAX LISTSchool Board's Finance Committee

The finance committee of the School Board is to meet this afternoon for the purpose of examining the list of exonerations submitted by Tax Collector H. C. Norton. The exonerations list this year contains the names of more than a score of taxables the collector has been unable to locate. Many of them moved from the borough, while others are not known at the address provided by the collector. In other cases property has been taxed in the borough and township, and varied reasons for exonerations are presented.

An adjourned meeting of the School Board will be held Monday night to act on the list. The matter of changing the eight grade pupils to the Fourth ward building will also be decided.

The Connellsville Municipal League formed a permanent organization at a thinly attended meeting last evening and lost one of its most enthusiastic members. James S. Darr, the militant reformer of the first ward, announced his resignation. He said that as a member of the Socialist party he could not remain in the Municipal League, the other members having objected. He declared that he was not willing to run the risk of expulsion, or causing the organization here to lose its charter, by remaining in the league. Socialists are required to vote the party ticket straight, and cannot mix in other political matters, it was explained. Darr said he could not convince his fellow-members of the Socialist party that they should all take an interest in the Municipal League. A prominent politician, he declared, suggested to some of the Socialists that he ought to be pulled out of the Municipal League, and they followed this advice. Darr took the opportunity to deliver a Socialist argument. Some persons, he said, are so narrow they don't want to understand its principles.

The constitution and by-laws submitted by Rev. J. L. Proudfoot were adopted with modifications. Any person 18 years or over may become a member. Applicants must be nominated at least one week before the meeting at which they are to be elected. A majority vote of those present at a meeting is required to elect anyone to membership. Nominal dues of $1 a year, payable quarterly in advance, were decided upon. The constitution declares that the league shall not become affiliated with any political party or faction.

Permanent officers were elected. They were: President, W. S. Behanna; secretary, W. E. Showman; treasurer, C. M. Leisinger. The choice of a vice president was deferred.

Attorney Higbee was present and took active part in the discussion. It was arranged to have a big meeting next Friday evening in the Chamber of Commerce rooms when the Clark commission government bill as it relates to Connellsville will be discussed. Mr. Higbee is of opinion that it may require a legal decision to determine Connellsville's status and he proposes that the Municipal League should be back of such action, if it is taken. It was arranged to have several speakers, including Mr. Higbee, to discuss their interpretation of the law.

Mr. Darr's vocabulary was the feature of the evening. Assuring the league of his sympathy, he advised the members to "turn the town upside down," but declared it must be done by work, and not by prayer.

FOUNDER OF SMOCK IS 95;

UNIONTOWN, June 20.—"I'm no count for nothin', livin' on borrowed time, just here, that's all," said Samuel Smock, founder of the town of Smock, in referring to his ninety-fifth birthday, which was Thursday.

"I don't know how it comes that I live so long," said Mr. Smock, "but my mother was 97 and my second sister 98 when she died. I've been good to the poor, I reckon I have. Maybe I've been spared on that account. I never belonged to any church. Preachers don't bother me much, and I don't bother them. Lodges never appealed to me. I expected to make enough to keep me when I got old without monkeying with any lodge."

"We didn't celebrate my birthday this year. I'm too near broke down and told my friends they'd have to wait till I got stouter. My legs have failed me from my knees down and I don't walk any farther than the barn. It's very little sleeping I do. I go to bed on a cup of coffee and a little bread, and my breakfast is a fried egg, bread and half a cup of coffee."

"I've been an iron man in my time and worked when other people were asleep. That's the reason I made something. My parents and nearly all my connections were poor, and now I could buy them all out. I'm the luckiest fellow in the world and never had a deal but what it needed me money. I never did any fiddling in a book, it was all in my head and no one had a better head."

"I never smoked a cigar, took a chew of tobacco or glass of beer, and never had a doctor in 45 years till just recently. I never had a pair of glasses and can still see to read without them. I have a good monument in Brownsville cemetery which cost me $1,000, and I expect to go there before long."

During the present season, the Cokers have not lost a game. Their playing has been of championship calibre, and deserve a victory. Denny O'Hara, who has played in this section for some time, is the manager of the Latrobe team, and it is safe to say that Denny will be given a good reception from the fans. Next week the Cokers play their first game away from home. They will play at Scottsdale on Saturday afternoon. Later the Scottsdale Independents will play a return game here.

HALTED; FURTHER
INQUIRY DOUBTFUL*Legislative Committee Will Learn Its Status Next Week.*MAY DIE WITH LEGISLATURE*In That Event Committeemen Will Not Return to Uniontown on June
30 to Further Investigate Charges;
Both Sides are Apparently Satisfied.

The consensus of opinion in Uniontown is that the hearing of the impeachment charges against Judge Robert E. Umbel has come to an end, for two years at least, and possibly for all time. Although the Legislative committee adjourned its sessions, until June 30, it is believed the members will learn next week that they will have no authority to continue the investigation beyond the life of the present Legislature. Although the Legislature has not agreed on an adjournment date it is generally agreed that the session will end on Thursday unless something unforeseen happens to prolong it.

Meanwhile the committee has asked Attorney General John C. Bell for an opinion as to whether it will have any power after the Legislature adjourns. This opinion Attorney General Bell has promised for early next week, just after the Legislature convenes. If the attorney general decides that the committee cannot continue legally after the legislative session closes, it is likely that the present committee will be discharged and a new one appointed by the next Legislature two years hence.

On the other hand, if the attorney general advises that the committee has power to continue, it is the intention of counsel for the defense to raise a constitutional question at the next session of the Legislature. If the committee, after having all the evidence, finds that Judge Umbel should be impeached, counsel for the defense will appeal.

Attorneys for Judge Umbel are of the opinion that the present proceedings must end by the time the Legislature adjourns, or the committee loses its power. If this contention be sustained and another committee not appointed by the Legislature in two years, Judge Umbel would be unimpeached.

Both sides are apparently satisfied with the outcome. Judge Umbel's friends and associates contend that his enemies have not only failed to prove that he has committed any impeachable offense, but have shown that the action was instigated from malice.

On the other hand, H. S. Dumbauld, who filed the charges at Harrisburg, said he is well satisfied with what has been accomplished. Dumbauld declares that he has submitted sufficient evidence to show that every charge made against the jurist can be sustained. He announced that he is well content to let the case rest where it is without revealing additional testimony that is yet to be offered.

SOCIETY.

Basket Picnic.

The annual basket picnic of the Ladies Aid Society of the First Baptist Church was held yesterday afternoon at Shady Grove Park. The picnicers with well-filled baskets left here on the 3 o'clock street car and on their arrival at the park the regular business of the society was taken up and disposed of. On account of the next regular meeting night coming on July 4, the meeting was postponed until two weeks later when it will be held at the home of Mrs. J. H. Newmyer on West French street. It will be the quarterly dollar meeting. About 5 o'clock an elaborate supper consisting of all the picnic delicacies of the season was served from one long table arranged on the diningroom pavilion. The picnic was the best ever held by the society. Mrs. Earl Stillwagon and two daughters of Scottsdale, and Mrs. Helen of Uniontown, were guests of the society.

If you are feeling blue and run down, your kidneys are wrong and you should not procrastinate. Thousands probably are dying every day from kidney disease, simply because they didn't heed the danger signals. Dizziness, specks before the eyes and that dragged down feeling are pretty sure signs of kidney trouble. Get a bottle of Thompson's Barossa and put your kidneys into a healthy condition in a few days. It's a liquid, stimulates quickly and starts to make you feel better at once.

Drop us a postal today. Just write: "Send me proof" and we will send you grateful testimonials from people cured by Barossa.

If you are troubled with constipation always take Thompson's Barossa and Mandrake Pills (25 cents) along with Barossa. Thompson Medical Co., Titusville, Pa.—Advertisement.

The Other Fellows Business

THE MAN WHO is conducting a highly successful business knows what the World is doing. He knows what his competitors are doing and he is posted regarding the moves made by the big interests. Instead of plunging wildly about in the whirlpool of modern business, the successful man is steadily, stroke by stroke, nearing the shore of control. He will soon become a controlling factor in his line and largely because he is a well posted man. He succeeds because of his ability but his ability lies largely in his knowledge.

To make it easy for the business men of this community to keep well posted on underlying conditions and the volume of trade, this Bank has been in the habit of issuing on the last day of each month a digest of business conditions for the Country. RAILROAD RATES.

The Courier has advocated and defended the partially successful plan of the Conneltsville coke operators for lower freight rates on their coke to numerous points of consumption, not because it believed railroad rates generally ought to be reduced, but because it felt that great discrimination was being practiced against the Conneltsville district. The testimony clearly shows that such discrimination has existed for many years, and will in a measure continue to exist after the rate decision is effective.

This discrimination against the Conneltsville region was a legacy handed down to present railroad management from the days when the only rule which prevailed in railroad rate making was "All the traffic will bear." This rule was modified by striking exceptions in cases where there was personal and official interest in the traffic and the rate, which modifications in the old bureau-making days were more frequent than otherwise. The Conneltsville coke region was assessed the highest rates because its coke was of the highest value. Conneltsville coke paid the penalty of excellence. Any other rule of rate-making would have developed the Conneltsville coke region into a region of other coke regions in Pennsylvania and West Virginia. As it was these regions were developed at the expense of the Conneltsville region.

The plan of the railroads for a general increase in freight rates is regarded in the best-informed circles as being justifiable and necessary by reason of recent advances in wages and other transportation costs. An increase in railroad earnings such as this increase in rates should bring about would be beneficial to the whole country, paradoxical as the statement may sound. It is conceded that the Democratic party has been the cause of many of the minor import will be met with caution, and that a period of repression and probably depression will ensue in business circles, in which event the traffic receipts of the railroads will necessarily be curtailed.

If the railroads are given an increase in rates, not only will they be fortified against financial embarrassments arising from this situation, but they will be able to go forward with contemplated track and terminal improvements and additions to their rolling stock. These expenditures will, in turn, strengthen the iron and steel industries, and probably enable them to weather the trouble and war of Democratic adjustment without injury to themselves or their workmen.

The Democratic party is doing a great deal to disturb and dissipate Republican prosperity, but there are some things it may honorably do that will go far toward absorbing the shock and mitigating its political responsibilities.

HOT TIMES IN FAYETTE.

Events are hotter than the weather in Fayette county and the Conneltsville coke region. The coke operators are now fighting the furnacemen for fair prices on their coke. The coke operators are fighting furiously among themselves to discredit the ruling faction and dislodge Fayette county's grip on the Western Pennsylvania spoils; and the militant members of the Conneltsville Council are exchanging unparliamentary pleasantries and threatening to throw each other out of the window.

In the midst of all this din of battle rises the piercing cry that Conneltsville does not fit into the Clark bill and cannot come under it; and that it is doubtful whether we will have any government at all after the first Monday of December, next.

The Courier is still of the opinion that, however awkwardly the Clark bill is constructed, a reasonable interpretation of the intent of the legislation will admit Conneltsville to its provisions. If the governor signs it and it becomes a law; if the governor vetoes the bill, we will have city government under the old act.

Ambitious citizens nursing hopes should therefore on no account abandon them.

The Municipal League of Conneltsville will debate the Clark Government-by-Commission-or-not-at-all act, which now hangs suspended between the legislative and the executive departments at Harrisburg much after the manner of Mahomet's coffin. There is plenty of room for debate under the able guidance of Counselor Higbee and the league will be kept busy during the heated term.

This is the open season for snakes, legislative and otherwise.

No sooner did the council agree to put more water in the sprinkling cart than the rains began to fall.

The proposition that the cops keep the streets clean is preposterous. The streets are beneath the dignity of brass buttons. The majesty of the law must not be dragged in the dust. Besides, the rules of the union forbid encroachment on the balance of the pay roll.

The Democratic Legislative Probe is hunting the headquarters of the Irrigation Committee.

Parliamentary courtesy is becoming an unknown quantity in Conneltsville councilmanic proceedings.

The Judicial probe developed the fact that Fayette county has some honest politicians who actually return the change.

Judge Christy says his feet are still cold. Perhaps they only warm up when he runs himself.

Nashville, Tenn.

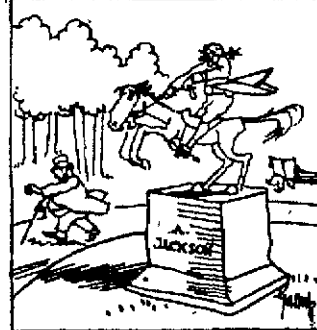

By GEORGE FITCH,
Author of "At Good Old Slawh."

Nashville, the capital of Tennessee and the repository of most of its history, lies in the writhing coils of the Cumberland river in the north central part of the state. It is so conveniently situated that the midnight choo-choo leaves for Alabama, Memphis and Cincinnati and get to these places in time for breakfast without over-exertion.

Nashville has 115,000 people and a record in history which is good enough to keep all these proud, and to supply plenty of surplus pride for future use. It was founded in 1780 when the middle west consisted of Indians and malaria in equal doses, and for many years it was the western outpost of civilization. Nashville produced two Presidents and educated a third in politics and has at present the youngest and lightest member of the United States Senate. It has survived two wars, a centennial exposition and the Carmack affray and in spite of the fact that it has been the storm center of Tennessee politics for over a century, it is still in a good state of preservation.

Nashville is noted for its fine, Grecian style house, its beautiful residence districts lined with southern mansions and shaded with southern trees, its belligerent newspapers, its fierce and uncontrollable equestrian statue of its greatest citizen, Andrew Jackson, its soldiers' cemeteries and its colleges. Nashville has so many colleges that they have to be listed alphabetically in the directory and a composite of their various yells would make the old time Rebel yell.

sound squeaky and peaceable. Nashville was built in the green hills beside the river and its streets undulate over them in a manner which keeps her automobilists shifting gears with great industry. It does not use its glorious history as a slumber couch but works diligently.

"The force and uncontrollable equestrian of its greatest citizen."

producing hardwood lumber and selling goods to all the South. It is a lap or two behind Memphis in population but yields to it in no other particular, and it takes four Chattanooga men to keep a Nashville man and a Memphis man in order while they are discussing their cities together.

Nation-Wide

Newspaper Publicity.

From Maine to California, from the Canadian northwest to sunny Florida, every morning, every evening, every day, the news of the world is told in the newspapers which dot the land from ocean to ocean.

It is almost impossible to conceive the tremendous power of informing the public which is thus combined in these daily purveyors of the world's news.

In no way dissociated from this great national force for spreading news is an equally strong force for disseminating advertising information.

Those manufacturers who want to create a widespread demand, and who want a larger distribution for their products recognize the influence of the newspaper and tell their story constantly in a dozen, a hundred, or a thousand cities and towns simultaneously.

Makers of nationally sold goods are realizing more and more every day that the daily newspaper offers a more economical and more efficient means of creating actual demand than any other advertising medium.

IN THE SELECTION OF YOUR WALL PAPER?

There is a logical sequence governed largely by the existing conditions in your home which if followed will produce correct results. Each room should be treated so as to give it correct form and proportions.

Then there is the question of color and design which must suit the individualities of each room as well as harmonize with the adjoining rooms. Especially is this true of parlors, dining room and reception hall or any group of rooms when considered collectively.

I can render you valuable assistance in the selection of your Wall Papers.

FACE DISFIGURED WITH BARBER'S ITCH

Pimples Came Out With Great Itching, Scratching Made Sores. Much Pain, Burning and Loss of Sleep. Cuticura Remedies Cured Him in Three Months.

2121 Moore St., Philadelphia, Pa.—"About twenty-three years ago I contracted a severe case of barber's itch. The trouble began on the left side of my face and extended down to the neck and around to the right side of my face. The pimples came out with great itching and I scratched and made sores. They caused me much pain and itching and burning and great loss of sleep. I suffered for four years and tried everything I heard of and different remedies. I had them lanced and it caused my face to be disfigured and disgusting to look at."

"Finally I began using Cuticura Soap; Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Resolvent. I saw a great change from the first. After using two boxes of Cuticura Ointment four cakes of Cuticura Soap and the Resolvent I was entirely cured in three months of the terrible disease and there is not one single mark on me." (Signed) Wm. J. Holmes, Apr. 6, 1912.

A single cake of Cuticura Soap and box of Cuticura Ointment are often sufficient when all else has failed. Cuticura Soap (25c) and Ointment (50c) are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. Sample of each mailed free, with 22-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

THE SECOND DAY'S BATTLE

The Headquarters of General Sickles during the battle.

Defense of Little Round Top - Death of Weed - Peach Orchard - Fight of the Louisiana Tigers - Intense Loyalty of Confederates To Southern Cause - Pathetic Hospital Scenes

THE morning of July 2nd, 1863, dawned bright and clear and the opposing forces were preparing and maneuvering for positions of vantage to resume the terrible conflict. Meade had perhaps made the best use of the delay between the night of the preceding day and the opening of the second day's battle. He had marshaled his entire army at points where they could best resist assault or originate attack, and even before the contest had really opened much of the loss of prestige of the day before had been regained and the Union forces went into the fray with fresh courage.

As early as nine o'clock in the morning fire was opened on the Sixty-Third Pennsylvania Regiment belonging to the corps commanded by General Sickles which had been picketing along the Emmitsburg road. A company of sharpshooters were sent out and they returned with the news that the woods were swarming with Confederates. The firing continued at intervals until about three o'clock in the afternoon when there was a terrific conflict around Round Top, which relied on toward the Peach Orchard. The artillery fire was appalling, but this was only the prelude to more desperate work. General Longstreet, one of the greatest generals of the Confederacy, was moving his men down to strike the extreme Union left, a blow and if possible crush it. The men in gray came on until it was thought that Little Round Top would fall into their hands. The arrival of Sykes' Corps saved the day for the Union forces at this particular point.

General Weed was shot while on the summit of Little Round Top. Believing that he was about to die he was giving Lieutenant Hazlett his final message when the bullet of a Confederate sharpshooter sank into Hazlett's brain and he fell dead. The body of his dying friend, General Weed, was carried to the Dushman farm house nearby which had been turned into a hospital. He knew that he could live only a few minutes longer, and when Lieutenant William H. Cronwell came to his side he asked that the ring he wore be taken from his finger and sent with his pocketbook containing private letters to the young lady to whom he was engaged to be married—the daughter of the late Simon Cameron of Pennsylvania, who for a time was Secretary of War in Lincoln's Cabinet.

The greatest bravery was displayed by both armies and there were several hand to hand conflicts. The spots known as the Wheatfield and the Valley of Death were covered with the dead and dying, and after the storm of bullets had ended and the hospital corps and burial parties came on the field the scene was a most horrible one. Down in the Valley of Death they found the body of a Confederate soldier—a fine specimen of manhood. He had crawled on to a position behind a rock and hid himself down to die. In his hands tightly clasped was an open pocket containing the pictures of three small children. Wounded and alone, the din of battle still sounding in his ears, he had gazed upon the faces of the three children so soon to be fatherless. The man was buried with the simple headstone "UNKNOWN" to mark the spot, while somewhere in the sunny South three little children waited in vain for the father whose last act in life was to look upon their baby faces. Who can picture the mental suffering of this man as his life ebbed away?

General Warren, who was Meade's chief engineer, played a most important part in the defense of Round Top, and it seems but fitting that a bronze memorial in his honor has been erected on the very spot upon which he stood during the early hours of the battle. It is said that General Warren never made an official report and was always extremely modest in speaking of his work there.

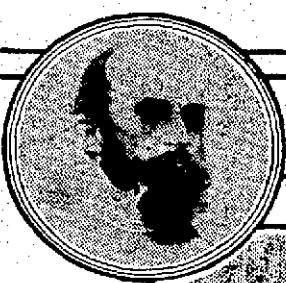

At the close of the day in this part of the field the Union forces still held Little Round Top, while the Confederates were at the westerly base of the hill and were also holding the rocky covers known as Devil's Den.

While these momentous events were transpiring at the left the fighting on the right was no less severe for General Ewell was at the same time making a well-directed effort to carry the right of the Union line, and it was during this engagement that the famous charge of the Louisiana Tigers was made. These men came forward seventeen hundred strong and met the Union forces in a hand to hand conflict. It was nearly dark when the charge took place and the semi-darkness added to the horror of the carnage. One of the most dramatic scenes occurred when a Confederate lieutenant tried to grasp the battery's gun which was planted on the breastworks. As he was in the act of gaining it a soldier named Rigin, who was his bearer, rode up and shot him through the body, and sending the colors Rigin leveled his revolver again, but ere he could fire he fell pierced with bullets and soon afterward expired. The men of both armies were now in the midst of the battery, and in the darkness it was difficult to distinguish friend from foe. A struggle for the gulch ensued. It had fallen into the hands of a Confederate. This was discovered by Lieutenant Brookway, who seized a stone and flung it to the ground and the next instant the Confederate was shot by his own musket. The Confederates by this time outnumbered the Union soldiers and the wild fighting followed. "Death on our own State soil rather than give the enemy our guns!" cried the Pennsylvanians. Just at that moment Carroll's Brigade came to the rescue and the Tigers retreated—these men of Early's Division who boasted that they had never before been repulsed in a charge. They retired with barely six hundred men and were never known afterward as an organization.

The intense loyalty of these men to the Southern cause was shown in an incident related by a Confederate surgeon who told the story a few days after the fight. He was pushing his way through a crowd of idle spectators when one of the wounded men called to him.

"Are you a Confederate?" he inquired in a feeble voice.

Gen. R.S. Ewell, C.S.A.

Gen. James Longstreet, C.S.A.

Hampton's Battery close to the Peach Orchard where the second day's battle was fought

"I pray the Lord my soul to take: And this I ask for Jesus' sake."

The battle for the day ended with the Confederates in possession of Cup's Hill and it was held by them throughout the night. On the left Sickles had been pressed slowly back to the position he had occupied in the morning and his lines were still in good order, but many of his brave men had gone to the Great Beyond. The situation had not greatly changed except that each army had lost about ten thousand men. The field after the battle was sickening, according to the story of a surgeon who was one of the first sent out. "Turn where I would," he said, "my eyes rested upon human bodies. Many of them were turning purple, and already there was a stench. Many had been killed in the act of firing. In one part of the field I found Major Light, the Assistant Adjutant-General on Ewell's staff. His horse also had been killed and was lying beside him. I turned my attention from the dead to the wounded. One of the first I found was a Confederate—a mere boy. He was beyond human aid and feebly asked for water. One of my men raised him gently and put the canteen to his lips. As there anything more we can do?" I asked. "Yes," he said, "a message."

I hastily pulled out a piece of paper and pencil. He gave me the address of his mother. "Tell her," he whispered, "how I died—she knows how I lived. A few minutes later he had passed away. I wrote to the boy's mother and afterward learned that he was her only child."

Several councils of war were held during the night by the officers but the greater number of the men slept for they knew that the first dawn of the morning meant the renewal of this awful struggle of brother against brother.

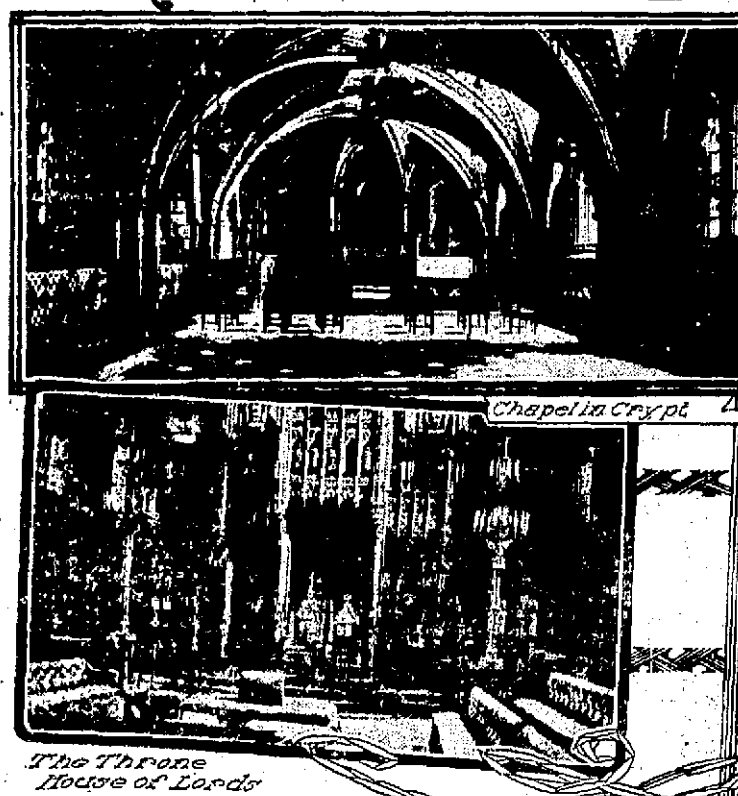

Old Home of England's Rulers - Burned in Part and Rebuilt Many Times - World's Most Beautiful Building - Contains Over 1000 Apartments

ENGLAND is justly proud of its famous Parliament House—the commanding structure which stands on the banks of the Thames and dominates the view of London from every point. It covers eight acres and was erected at the cost of nearly fifteen million dollars, and is today the largest and most beautiful meeting place of any legislative body in the world. It was formerly known as the Palace at Westminster and was the home of a number of England's rulers before the time of Henry VIII. This monarch practically gave up possession of the palace and then he moved to Whitehall, leaving the Westminster Palace to the Lords, Commons and great offices of State.

The beginning of Parliament House dates back to the days of King Canute, who when he came to the throne of England took under his protection the abbey and monastery of St. Peter's at Westminster adjacent to the palace. In 1046 a part of this palace was destroyed by fire but it was soon rebuilt. Additions were made in the succeeding reigns, notably by William Rufus to whom the existence of the present Great Hall is due. Henry III added other apartments and redecored the old ones. Nearly all of the Plantagenet Kings spent large sums on its extension and decoration. Several times it was partly destroyed, but this always resulted in the parts being rebuilt on a larger scale and decorated in a more beautiful fashion. The most extensive alterations were made during the reign of Edward II. The Courts of Law and offices of the High Treasurer and Lord Chancellor were rebuilt. The extent of the Palace at that period can be realized when it is known that it covered the whole of the site between Westminster Abbey and the river.

From the reign of Henry VIII the building at Westminster ceased to be a royal palace and all the succeeding events which occurred there are recorded in Parliamentary history. As time went on more space was required for the transaction of business and additions were added from time to time. This caused the accumulation of a lot of lumber in the cellars and an order was issued that it be burned in the gutting. While this order was being carried out on October 10th, 1834, a fire was set on fire and notwithstanding that every effort was made to quench the flames the entire palace with the exception of the Great Hall was destroyed. Many of the pictures and articles of furniture were saved, but the historic old buildings representing the architecture of several centuries were swept away. The traditions, however, did not perish, for the rules and regulations of Parliament are the same today as they were centuries ago for no country clings to antiquated customs with a greater tenacity than Great Britain. As soon as the site could be cleared designs for a new building were invited, and one hundred and eight were submitted by English architects. A Parliamentary Commission was appointed to decide upon the style of architecture, and after much wrangling among its members the drawings that were submitted by Sir Charles Barry were selected. The design is based upon the Sixteenth Century Gothic style with some modern additions. Barry was hampered by suggestions from the Commission from time to time, but he finally succeeded in having one of the most beautiful buildings in the world erected. Certainly as a specimen of modern Gothic architecture it excels anything in existence today.

Visitors are shown through the building on Saturday, and ample time is allowed for a thorough inspection of the beautiful furnishings and decorations of the rooms. During the sessions of Parliament it is almost impossible to gain admittance as the accommodation for visitors is so limited that members are compelled to ballot each day for the right of issuing visitors' tickets. Parliament usually goes in session about two o'clock and closes at midnight. The visitors' entrance is by the royal staircase under the Victoria Tower which ascends to the Norman Porch, where a door on the right opens into the King's Robing Room. This apartment is rich in treasures illustrating the legend of King Arthur. At the recent opening of Parliament King George V used this chamber when he donned his robe and crown for the procession which passed through the Royal Gallery to the House of Lords. There is nothing particularly noteworthy in this Gallery except the two large frescoes "The Death of Nelson" and "The Meeting of Wellington and Blucher After Waterloo."

It would be useless to attempt to describe in detail the beauties of these apartments, and the writer must be content to tell only of the things which seem to please the average traveler (and the House of Lords is one of these). It has been called the "Gilded Chamber," and justly, too, for it is certainly the most gorgeous apartment in the whole building. It is lighted by twelve stained glass windows containing portraits of the Kings and Queens of England. In the niches between the windows are statues of the barons who compelled King John to sign Magna Charta. Red morocco benches are used to seat the five hundred and fifty noble Lords who are entitled to seats in the House. The throne, covered with a gilded canopy, is at the South end of the room. On the left is the Queen's throne, and on the right is a lower throne for the Prince of Wales. The seats on either side are reserved for Ambassadors and other distinguished guests. Directly in front is the "Wool-sack" on which the Lord Chancellor sits, and at the other end is the Bar at which the faithful Commons attend to hear the speech from the throne and to hear the Royal Assent to the bills which they have passed. Above are two galleries—a small one for favored visitors and another for the reporters. The room contains some remarkable frescoes, among them heroic symbolic figures of Justice, Chivalry and Religion.

The House of Commons is a much smaller and plainer apartment than the House of Lords but none the less interesting, for it was here that the great Gladstone used to speak and when in power dominated the policy of England. There, too, Disraeli, that suave, crafty statesman, forced Parliament to do his bidding many times. The Speaker's Chair takes the place of the throne, and the mace which rests on the table before him is the symbol of the dignity and privilege of the House of Commons. This room was first used in 1862 and has been the scene of many stirring events.

Westminster, or the Great Hall, is one of the show places of London. It is said to be the largest hall in the world with a timber roof unsupported and was built by William Rufus and enlarged by Richard II. In 1820 it was discovered that parts of the roof were decaying and this was restored by the use of oak lumber taken from some of the discarded English battlefields.

The Courts of Justice on the west side of the Hall are interesting from the fact that Kings and Queens have been on trial within their walls. It was in these rooms in 1517 that three Queens—Katherine of Aragon, Mary of Scotland and Mary of France—pleaded with Henry VIII for mercy toward the four hundred and eighty men concerned in the "Rising of the Princes." Thomas Wentworth, the Earl of Strafford, was tried there in 1649, while King Charles I and his Queen were seated behind a curtain listening to the case. Less than a year later King Charles himself was brought to trial as a "tyrant traitor and murderer." Warren Hastings was tried before the Court in this building in 1776. In 1822 the Courts were moved from this place to the Royal Courts of Justice Building on the Strand.

Amos 6:1-6—June 22.
"Buck good, and not evil, that go may this."—Amos 2:14.

It is safe to say that everybody is seeking good, and not evil. Everybody is seeking pleasure, and not misery—happiness, and not woe. The difficulty is that our judgments are more or less perverted. Some have greater wisdom than others; but there is none perfect, "none righteous, no, not one." All come short of the glorious standard which God has set.

The difficulty is that we were all born in sin, and are all misshapen. Not only our bodies are imperfect, but our brains are unbalanced—some one way, some another. Consequently young men and maiden, looking for wisdom from childhood upon the problems of life, have various conceptions of happiness, and make various resolutions and endeavors respecting the filling of their cup with blessings—long life, riches, honor, etc.

The teachers of our schools have a most wonderful opportunity for influencing the course of humanity. We rejoice that they are striving nobly for the fulfillment of gracious, heavenly ideals, and are using their opportunities for blessing their pupils. Yet evidently many of them have but a slight appreciation of their privileges. Some, of course, like the remainder of the world, are selfish, and think of their work from the business standpoint—so much work, so much pay.

The first and chief responsibility for children rests upon their parents, the majority of whom, no doubt, to some extent recognize that responsibility in God's sight and man's. But they labor under the difficulties of their own ignorance. They know not "the proper course to take for themselves. Their lives have been a succession of blunders, and they presume that their children must blunder similarly. Not seeing the principles underlying life's experiences, they are unable to guide their children intelligently. Here teachers find their opportunity. But how little any one seems able to accomplish, and how discouraged philanthropists become!

On the whole, however, a broad view of the past fifty years shows progress in many directions. Our cities are cleaner—both physically and morally—at least so far as outward appearances are concerned. No longer does vice flaunt itself in the face of society. The battle against intemperance and the social evil is making progress in that it has made former conditions impossible. In some states the progress has been more than in others.

New Issues Now—New Temptations. Our lesson tells of a time in the history of Israel when many of the nation's wisest and most brilliant people had settled down to ease and luxury—self-gratification. They considered that they had won in the battle of life, and would now enjoy the fruits of their diligence. The Lord through the Prophet upbraided them, declaring He was not pleased with such a course. He told them that woe would result.

The mission of Amos was to call attention to the fact that aggressive selfishness had accumulated great riches, that the wealthy were living in luxury, and that these conditions fostered pride and moral laxity amongst the wealthy; while the poor were being filled with avarice, losing respect for God, religion, truth and mercy. Society was on the edge of a volcano, and God declared that an eruption was at hand.

Present Day Conditions Correspond. Our lesson is not inappropriate to our times. Notwithstanding the progress made, notwithstanding the philanthropic sentiments of many, inside and outside Christian denominations, nevertheless there is danger. First of all, let us consider the danger of the rich. The wealth of today reaches to a certain extent to the very humblest, and scatters blessing. But the bulk of the world's wealth is in the hands of the few.

The luxuriously rich are in great danger of injuring themselves. Some cannot devise means by which to consume even their incomes. Luxuries of every kind are tasted in hope of finding happiness. Not succeeding, they still pursue it. Wealth brings increased opportunity for sin in its various forms, including debauching.

The influence upon the poor is notable. The latter, seeking pleasure, imagine erroneously that the rich and indolent are finding it, while they themselves seek in vain. Thus the poor, surrounded by the wonderful blessings of our day, are often miserable, because their minds are discontented. They desire happiness, and believe that they can obtain it only through wealth. The result is that their hearts are filling with anger, malice, and jealousy of the rich.

Both rich and poor need to learn the great lesson that pleasure lies, not in self-indulgence, but in self-sacrifice in service of others. God's Message to both classes is, "Seek righteousness, seek weakness."—Zechariah 2:3.

CORRECT MERCHANDISE. WRIGHT-METZLER CO. INTELLIGENT SERVICE

The "Bigness" of a Store

is not measured by a tape-line by thinking people nowadays, but by the rule of accomplishment. Although this is the BIGGEST store in floor-space, it is not necessary—nor desirable—to make advertising copy of the fact. What people know—and can see—doesn't need daily comment, and if this store wasn't physically the "biggest"—in area and brains—persistent claims, without action, would never make it so.

If P. T. Barnum, in the old show days, had exhibited a certified copy of the North Pole, he could have gotten away with it, but Dr. Cooke happened along at a latter date and it got away with him. Times have changed. People who spend money for the necessities of life are wise beyond the olden days, and no store stands much show to Barnum or Dr. Cooke the population and work it twice.

If Wright-Metzler Company hadn't drilled "stick to the truth if you do lose a sale," into every member of its store-family from the first, the wheels might have run backward to zero in no time.

So, BIGGEST in selling-space, biggest in value-giving; in merchandise; in quality; in real service; in generosity to its workers, but out of the running among EXAGGERATORS.
